Plaintiff,

v.

FIFTH SUPERSEDING
INDICTMENT

JOSEPH M. DIBEE,
JOSEPHINE S. OVERAKER,
JUSTIN SOLONDZ, and BRIANA WATERS,

Defendants.

THE GRAND JURY CHARGES THAT:

(Conspiracy)

Beginning in or about 1996, and continuing until in or about October 2001, at Olympia, in the Western District of Washington, and elsewhere, JOSEPH M. DIBEE, JOSEPHINE S. OVERAKER, Kevin Tubbs, JUSTIN SOLONDZ, BRIANA WATERS, William C. Rodgers, and others known and unknown to the grand jury did knowingly and willfully combine, conspire, and agree to commit offenses against the United States, to wit: arson, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 844; using destructive devices during crimes of violence, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 924(c); and making unregistered destructive devices, in violation of Title 26, United States Code, Section 5861(f).

Manner and Means of the Conspiracy

Beginning in or about 1996, members of the conspiracy agreed to commit, and in fact committed, arsons and other crimes in a supposed effort to advance the causes of environmental protection and animal rights. Members of the conspiracy selected a variety of buildings, vehicles, and other property as targets for their arsons and other crimes. Members of the conspiracy generally selected as targets buildings that either were owned by the United States Government or were used in interstate commerce or in activity affecting interstate commerce, and that members of the conspiracy believed were used for purposes that harmed either the environment or animals.

In most but not all cases, members of the conspiracy made and used destructive devices, as defined in Title 26, United States Code, Section 5845, to commit their arsons. Typically, these handmade devices incorporated kitchen timers, matches, sponges, and containers filled with fuel. Members of the conspiracy did not apply for permission to make and register these destructive devices in the National Firearms Registration and Transfer Record, as required by law. In most cases, members of the conspiracy placed these destructive devices at targets during the nighttime. Timers were used to create a time delay, so that fires ignited after members of the conspiracy had fled the scene.

In many cases, after committing arsons or other crimes, members of the conspiracy issued communiques claiming the crimes had been committed to protect the environment or animals. The communiques typically claimed that the crimes had been committed by groups named or described as the Earth Liberation Front (ELF) or the Animal Liberation Front (ALF). Members of the conspiracy intended that, by committing these crimes, they would influence and affect the conduct of government, commerce, private business, and the civilian population, and they intended to retaliate against the conduct of government, commerce, and private business.

In or about 2000, members of the conspiracy decided to attempt to increase the number of participants in the conspiracy. Beginning in approximately March 2000, members of the conspiracy held a series of secret meetings at locations in Oregon,

1 California, Arizona, and Washington at which they induced others to join the conspiracy.
2 At these meetings, members of the conspiracy agreed to focus their efforts on opposing 3 what they believed to be genetic engineering. As a result, they discussed targeting 4 government facilities and companies that they believed were used to further genetic 5 engineering. At these meetings, members of the conspiracy also discussed the use of 6 arson, and even demonstrated how to manufacture time-delayed destructive devices that 7 could be used to commit arsons.

8 In or about 2000, members of the conspiracy decided that, as part of their 9 campaign to stop genetic engineering, they would commit not only arson, but also other 10 crimes, including destroying what they considered to be genetically-engineered crops and 11 trees. To that end, members of the conspiracy decided to pull crops out of the ground and 12 "girdle" (remove rings of bark from) trees. Members of the conspiracy decided they 13 would perform these "field actions" before security became heightened. Thus, they 14 decided to resort to arson, which they believed would trigger heightened security, only 15 after these field actions. As a result, during 2000 and the spring of 2001, members of the 16 conspiracy performed several field actions in Washington and Oregon. Then, on May 21, 17 2001, members of the conspiracy set fire to two facilities they believed were used in 18 genetic engineering of poplar trees, namely Jefferson Poplar Farm in Clatskanie, Oregon,
19 and the Center for Urban Horticulture at the University of Washington in Seattle, 20 Washington.

21 Overt Acts

22 In furtherance of this conspiracy, and to accomplish one or more of the objects of
